

EVOLUTIONARY MEDICINE & PUBLIC HEALTH SEMINAR SERIES

Michaelmas Term 2019

Wednesdays, 11:30am-1pm, 64 Banbury Road

16th October (W1): Professor Kayla King (Department of Zoology, University of Oxford)
Protectors and killers: microbial drivers of pathogen evolution

23rd October (W2): Dr Micheal De Barra (Centre for Culture and Evolution, Brunel University)
The evolution of ineffective and harmful medical treatments

30th October (W3): Dr Rebecca Sear (Evolutionary Demography Group, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine) Evolutionary approaches to health inequalities

6th November (W4): Professor Robert Barton (Department of Anthropology, Durham University) Evolution and development of the human brain: implications for neuro-pathology

13th November (W5): Dr Jonathan Stieglitz (Institute of Advanced Studies, Toulouse University, France) Indigenous South American Tsimane show the lowest levels of coronary atherosclerosis

20th November (W6): Dr Sarah Johns (School of Anthropology & Conservation, University of Kent) Tinder, #metoo, and cyberharassment: Evolutionary and behavioural perspectives on unsolicited sexual images

27th November (W7): Professor Richard Peto (Department of Primary Care, University of Oxford) Halving premature deaths

4th December (W8): Professor Jonathan Wells (Childhood Nutrition Research Centre, UCL) Evolutionary public health – from theory to cohort studies and randomised trials