

had an important influence on two of the most renowned Dinka Christian evangelists of the last century, as well as on a Dinka who became one of the first Nuer prophets. An inherent experience of Divinity was translated by them into new religious expressions. 'Free-divinities' found them in their exile, and made them truly free.

THE CONTRIBUTORS

AHMED AL-SHAHI obtained his D.Phil. in social anthropology at Oxford. He taught at the University of Khartoum for several years and now teaches anthropology in the Department of Social Studies, University of Newcastle upon Tyne. He co-edited Wisdom from the Nile and is the author of Themes from Northern Sudan.

JAYNIE ANDERSON was educated at Melbourne and obtained her Ph.D. at Bryn Mawr College. She has held research fellowships at St Hugh's College and Wolfson College, Oxford, and is now a tutor in Fine Art at the Ruskin School of Drawing and Fine Art, University of Oxford. She has edited two volumes of the select papers of Edgar Wind, The Eloquence of Symbols and Hume and the Heroic Portrait, and is currently publishing volumes of the correspondence of Giovanni Morelli.

TALAL ASAD studied social anthropology at Edinburgh and then Oxford, where he obtained his D.Phil. He spent several years teaching in the University of Khartoum and is now Senior Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Hull. He is the author of The Kababish Arabs and editor of Anthropology and the Colonial Encounter, and is currently engaged in a study of religion and power in medieval Christianity.

M. F. C. BOURDILLON obtained his D.Phil. in social anthropology at Oxford and is now an Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology, University of Zimbabwe. He has done research on various aspects of Shona life and is the author of Shona Peoples as well as numerous papers and articles on various aspects of Shona ethnography and the anthropology of religion.

FRANCIS M. DENG is the author of numerous books on the Dinka, including Tradition and Modernization, The Dinka and Their Songs, Africans of Two Worlds and The Man Called Deng Majok: A Biography of Power, Polygyny, and Change. A former Sudanese diplomat, he was originally trained in law at Khartoum and obtained his doctorate at Yale. He is now Senior Research Associate at the Woodrow Wilson Center, Smithsonian Institution, and Jennings Randolph Distinguished Fellow at the US Peace Institute, Washington, DC.

EVA GILLIES was educated in Argentina and at Oxford, where she obtained her D.Phil. in social anthropology. Her fieldwork was conducted in the Nigerian Middle Belt. Her publications include Yoruba Towns and Cities and an abridgement of E. E. Evans-Pritchard, Witchcraft, Oracles and Magic among the Azande. She was sometime Lecturer in Anthropology at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. Now retired, she has found social anthropology an excellent preparation for village life, whether in West Africa or Sussex.

GEORGE P. HAGAN was educated at the University of Ghana and obtained his D.Phil. in social anthropology at the University of Oxford. He is currently Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of African Studies, University of Ghana, Legon. He has published numerous articles on Ghanaian societies.

ANNA MARIE HAGLUND-HEELAS studied social anthropology at Stockholm and the London School of Economics. Her dissertation, 'Saving Souls in Thailand', was published in Stockholm, and she is now a UNESCO Research Fellow in Thailand.

PAUL HEELAS obtained his D.Phil. in social anthropology at Oxford. He is the co-editor of Indigenous Psychologies and co-author of The Way of the Heart (Rajneesh), and has published articles in the field of psychological anthropology. He now teaches in the Department of Religious Studies, University of Lancaster, and is working on new religious movements in Thailand and the West.

WENDY JAMES is Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Oxford and Fellow of St Cross College. She obtained her D.Phil. at Oxford and has taught at the University of Khartoum. She is the author of Kwanim Pa: The Making of the Uduk People and The Listening Ebony: Moral Knowledge, Religion, and Power among the Uduk of Sudan.

DOUGLAS H. JOHNSON is a historian, educated at Haverford College and UCLA. He conducted fieldwork in the Southern Sudan and was formerly Assistant Director for Archives in the Regional Ministry of Culture and Information, Juba. He is the author of several articles on Sudanese history, co-editor of The Ecology of Survival: Case Studies from Northeast African History, and is currently completing a book on the history of Nuer prophets.

ROGER JUST obtained his D. Phil. in social anthropology at Oxford after receiving a classical education in Australia. He has been a Research Fellow at Wolfson College, Oxford, and Assistant Director of the British Institute in Athens. He now teaches Modern Greek in the Department of Classical Studies, University of Melbourne.

CARMELO LISÓN-TOLOSANA obtained his D.Phil. in social anthropology at Oxford and has conducted fieldwork in Aragon and Galicia. He is the author of Belmonte de los Caballeros: A Sociological Study of a Spanish Town. Since 1967, he has taught at the Universidad Complutense, Madrid, becoming Professor of the newly created Department of Social Anthropology in 1975.

JOHN RYLE studied social anthropology at Oxford, and has since been Assistant Editor of the Times Literary Supplement, Editor of Quarto, Deputy Literary Editor of the London Sunday Times and consultant to the Ford Foundation in Rio de Janeiro. He is author of Warriors of the White Nile and of a forthcoming book on Brazil, An Unfinished Country.

BRIAN STREET obtained his D.Phil. at Oxford and is now a Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Sussex. He has written a number of articles on the theme of European representations of other cultures and is the author of The Savage in Literature.
